BIOGRAPHY

Kaylee Conley is an associate attorney with the business transaction law practice group. Kaylee's practice focuses on representing financial institutions in commercial and industrial financing deals, real estate transactions, and construction loans.

A native of Muncie, Ind., Kaylee attended Indiana University's Bloomington campus for her undergraduate studies. After graduating with a major in political science and a minor in business, Kaylee attended the Robert H. McKinney School of Law at Indiana University in Indianapolis. While attending law school, she served as an executive board member for the Women's Caucus organization and helped organize their annual auctions benefiting local Indianapolis organizations. Kaylee participated in the Robert H. Staton Moot Court Competition, where she was named to The Order of the Barristers in 2019. She was also selected to hold a position on the executive board of the moot court competition and participated in national competitions.

EXPERIENCE

Prior to joining Katz Korin Cunningham, Kaylee worked in the family law practice group of an Indianapolis-area law firm.
